

Looking ahead to the future...

When the Healthy Rivers / Wai Ora project has done its job, and there are regulations in place to help achieve its goals, what will that look like in respect of implementation for the resources users and for the regulator?

This brief presentation will introduce concepts relating to effective implementation that may assist with selecting policy options.

The presentation will:

- Provide a reminder about the restrictive aspects of the Resource Management Act
- Describe some basic theory around achieving positive behaviour change and regulatory compliance
- Highlight the differences between 'good rules' and 'bad rules'
- Raise awareness of expectations-versus-reality of achieving compliance through monitoring and enforcement
